He returned to his own country, where he served as pastor, and also as missionary in Russia, where on one occasion he was condemned to be shot, but had an almost miraculous escape in answer to prayer. A Rice Dessert For Dinner Sizzles

Baked Rice Pudding is hearty, delicious and good looking, it takes so little time—compared with the old-fashioned when made with packaged pre-cooked rice.

Baked Rice Pudding

⅔ cup Minute Rice
2½ cups milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
⅓ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg white
2 tablespoons sugar

Combine packaged pre-cooked rice and milk in saucepan; bring just to moisten all rice. Bring quickly to a boil over high heat; remove from heat. In a 1½-quart baking dish, mix together eggs, ⅓ cup sugar, salt, nutmeg, and vanilla. Add hot rice mixture slowly, mixing well. Place in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 35 minutes, stirring after 10, 15, and 25 minutes of baking.

Beat egg white until foamy throughout; add 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, and continue beating until meringue is stiff and glossy. Spread meringue over pudding. Return to oven and bake at 400°F. until meringue is lightly browned (about 5 minutes) makes 5 servings.

Schools May Use Rental Book Plan

A rental system for school textbooks is being offered to Appomattox County public school parents. A form letter has been distributed this week to parents, and it asks for a reply by Monday, May 16, with signature by the parent as to whether the parent will rent the school books, or prefers to purchase new texts.

The rental system has worked out successfully elsewhere, and it is the opinion of local school officials that it would be a nice savings in costs to pupils and parents.

Under the plan, ral textbooks in grades one through twelve would be rented for a session's use, and be turned in at the end of the session. This would also apply to reading workbooks in grades one through seven. The parent would only have to pay the rental fee

Local school officials feel that the rental system is the progressive way to provide texts, and that parents will save money. It is hoped that parents will sign and return the questionnaire form by Monday, May 16.

Southside Electric Co-op Cites Story of Its Growth

Rural Electrification is the heart of the present day business system. 1960 marks the Silver Jubilee Anniversary of the beginning of electric service to every rural family. Loans from the Rural Electrification Administration to private locally-owned electric cooperatives and other rural suppliers made this step of progress possible.

Since the Southside Electric Cooperative has borrowed all of its construction funds from the Rural Electrification Administration, C. S. Hooper, Jr., Member and Manager, was asked to comment on the program. Mr. Hooper stated:

"Power companies had concluded that rural people would not use enough electricity to make it feasible to build rural lines except to a select few Big Farms provided they pay for building the lines and give them to the power companies. The rates to even these select few was higher than was charged their city cousins. Until 1935,less than ten percent (10%) of the farms in Southside Virginia had central station electric service and those that were able to afford this service paid outrageous rates for this service.

"American farmers were tired of waiting for electric power to lessen their labors, to light their homes and farms, to make living more convenient and better. The farmers voiced their demand for electrical power; and on May 11, 1935, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed the executive order under the War Emergency Act creating the Rural Electrification Administration. In 1936 this Act was recreated into law by Congress as an independent agency. Later by an Act of Congress it was made a part of the Department of Agriculture; the Administrator reporting to the Secretary of Agriculture. This Law is still in effect today. Thus Rural Electrification was born.

'REA is a lending agency — it is the banker for the rural electric systems. The money is obtained from the money markets of the world, and it is not tax money as many are led to believe. This money was made available to power companies and cooperatives at two per cent (2%) interest and a thirty-five year repayment period. It was expected that the commercial power companies would apply for most of the loans and that most of the job of rural electrification would be done by them. But they didn't!

"Therefore, farmers began organizing rural electric cooperatives. These systems were incorporated under State laws to relieve the individual members of financial responsibility.

"The Cooperatives applied to REA for loans. If REA found the proposed project feasible, the loan was made.

'Note that the government does not give the Cooperative anything —it loans; the systems pay back the principal with interest.

"REA does not construct, own or operate any electric facilities. It does provide service to cooperatives in need of assistance with problems of engineering and management.

"The more than one thousand rural electric cooperatives serving over four million (4,000,000) rural consumers are home-owned, locally controlled and privately operated, tax-paying business organizations that borrow money from REA and pay back the principal with interest.

'The Southside Electric Cooperative came into being in 1937.

"The first meeting of Southside Electric Cooperative was held in the Iron Bridge Grange Hall in Blackstone, Virginia, by a group of rural people interested in obtaining central station electric service. The system was incorpora-

He was enthusiastic in his praise of the possibilities for an excellent course, and backers are hopeful that this project can soon become a reality.
